With the approach of the end of the year there is bound to be a quickening of interest in national politics. For the past few months the headquarters of both political parties have been unusually quiet in Washington. This has been due to more than one reason. First there has been a disposition to let politics play a second fiddle while President Hoover was seeking to outline a program for restoring confidence at home, and one for agreement with European nations on disarmament and other questions abroad. Another reason is financial. With hard times upon us, political organizations have suffered along with everyone, and funds for campaigning have been none too easy to get.

The Republican National Committee will meet in the middle of December, however, for the purpose of selecting a meeting place for Republicans in 1932, and after that the Democratic National Committee will hold a meeting for the purpose of selecting a city for the 1932 Democratic national convention. Then will follow state primaries and conventions and, before we know it we will be in the midst of another presidential campaign.

Just at present, judging from newspaper gossip, there seems to be more interest in the identity of the Democratic standard bearer in 1932. This is naturally true, because the Democratic party is out of power and the presidential field is wide open. For some time, of course, Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, has been out in front, but there are shrewd politicians who think that he may develop maximum strength too early in the game. A recent poll of Democratic newspapers indicated that the majority of them thought that Roosevelt would be nominated, although the majority sentiment of the editors themselves favored Newton D. Baker, the Secretary of War in President Wilson's cabinet.

Roosevelt is said to be very strong in the South and West. During the early part of the year he was making rapid strides toward the nomination. Of late, however, his progress has not been so rapid. Whether this is due to a reversal in sentiment, or to the belief of his managers that he has been gathering strength too early and too rapidly remains to be seen. At any rate, the horizon is not so cloudless, from Mr. Roosevelt's viewpoint, as it was a few months ago. This is in a measure due to the reported rift between Governor Roosevelt and no less a figure than Al Smith, the Democratic standard bearer of 1928. Political developments during the past few weeks indicate that Smith and Tammany may not be so enthusiastic over Governor Roosevelt's candidacy as might be anticipated. One of the first evidences of this came in Mr. Smith's opposition to Governor Roosevelt's pet scheme for handling the forestry question in New York. The question is in itself, of course, not a national issue, but the significance lies in the opposition on the part of Mr. Smith,

ISBELL FUNERAL TO BE HELD AT STOCKTON, CAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Priscilla Isbell, 29 who was killed early Sunday Morning in an auto accident in San Jose, will be held in Stockton. Her brother, Howard Downing and Mrs. Downing with other relatives of San Francisco were here for the arrangements.

Mrs. Isbell was instantly killed when she was thrown from an automobile driven by Albert R. Smith. Smith drove out from Hedding street and crashed into the trailer of a United Milk company truck, driven by Joseph Sweeney of San Francisco. The impact of the crash forced open the door of Smith's car and threw Mrs. Isbell beneath the wheels of the trailer, causing death instantly. The accident occurred at 4 a. m. at the corner of The Alameda at Hedding St.

Mrs. Isbell has resided here for eight years. She is survived by a daughter, Patricia Eleanor, 10, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Downing of Stockton, Mr. Howard Downing, who is well known in Campbell and eight other brothers and three sisters.

After an inquest was held, the driver of the truck was released by officers.

The Auxiliary of the Orchard City Garage will hold a card party on the lower floor in the banquet room of the Odd Fellows hall Saturday, November 7.

Many prizes are to be given away and refreshments will be served at the close of the games. An admission of 35c will be charged, the proceeds to go toward the relief work in this community.

which seemed a little more vehement than the nature of the question warranted. Whether Tammany and Mr. Smith will oppose Governor Roosevelt openly, in the coming convention, remains to be seen. And it is only fair to say that while Tammany opposition might injure Mr. Roosevelt's chances in New York and other eastern states it would tend to help him in the West and South.

In the meantime people over the country are beginning to talk about the qualifications and prospects of "Jim" Reed, of Missouri, for the nomination. It is admitted that, if nominated, he would be a formidable candidate. Recent developments have tended to bring international issues to the forefront and it is among issues of this sort that Senator Reed shines. He opposes American membership in the League of Nations and the World Court, is opposed to debt cancellation and the interference of Uncle Sam in European affairs. There can be little doubt that these

All persons driving along Campbell avenue at the school last night (Monday) were stopped and the headlights of their car tested. Captain John Pacheco and his squad of about 15 men were at work from 7 o'clock until late giving the tests.

Many cars were found with faulty lights. These were given a card which has to be turned in to authorities within two days signed by an official of a headlight testing station showing that the lights had been adjusted.

This service was obtained by Harry Evans and Frank Coupland. Capt. Pacheco informed Evans and Coupland that he would co-operate with them in the elimination of speeding on Campbell avenue, in the testing of headlights and arresting those using no mufflers. Captain Pacheco and his squad will be in Campbell often this winter to work with the local officers.

By Country Women

A program of unusual interest was presented to the Country Woman's Club and their visitors Monday afternoon.

Mrs. T. A. Cutting, chairman of the committee in charge was unable to be present, owing to illness, and Mrs. W. I. Merrill presided, and was assisted by Mrs. J. C. Ainsley.

In her opening remarks she spoke of the song, "The Maple Leaf Forever," considered for a long time the national anthem of Canada but was superseded by "O, Canada" (Robert Stanley Ware). Mrs. G. S. Robson played the hymn and Mrs. Merrill read two of the verses.

Miss Hinze of the State Teachers College was then introduced to speak upon the topic, "Canada, Personal Glimpses." Miss Hinze has made two extended auto trips through the central and western parts of that great country, and is one of those who travel with a "seeing eye" and a mind awake to interpret what the eye has seen.

Her first impression was that she was visiting a land of pioneering and pioneers. The great agricultural sections are developing rapidly with great activity on the part of the government, and the real cooperation of the agriculturalists with the government agents and regulations.

A "feeling of size" and of "vast expanse" was another vivid impression.

She discussed the Indians and compared them with those in the United States, as she also did the Chinese. Another interesting item was attitude of the people toward leisure and play, in which they are more liberal than we are.

One of the high lights of the afternoon were the two solos sung by Stephen Merrill, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Johns. His selections were "Homing" by Teresa

The second speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Katherine Cooper Blair, took her hearers to a real foreign country, Persia, where she and her husband, Dr. Edward Blair have been doing medical mission work for several years.

In her own inimitable humorous way she presented interesting pictures of travel, shopping and the life of women of that far land.

She also explained the "leisure" of that country and the difficulties incident to keeping track of time where the new day begins at sunset and

ARMISTICE DAY

OAKLAND, Nov. 2—When the speed kings of the country meet on the new Oakland Speedway again, Armistice Day, November 11, the will be greeted by an entirely resurfaced track. Workmen have already removed the old surface and are at present thoroughly wetting the foundation so that it will be packed hard for the new top of oiled dirt. It is estimated that the latter will be applied in about a week.

Linn Mathewson, general manager of the Oakland Speedway association has announced that this job will cost in excess of $7,000, but that it will make the track even faster than was originally believed possible.

"However, we will need a speedway that will hold nearly the maximum speed the expensive racing cars are capable of averaging, because of the fact that we are planning a meet on November 11, that includes three sprints, a 20-mile consolation race for those cars not fast enough to qualify for the dashes and a 30-mile main event" he explained. "And there'll be plenty of thrills in a program of this kind because the pilots must keep their throttles pressed to the floor boards from the time the starter drops his flag until the checked bunting is waved across the radiator of the winner because the competitors ride so closely together that the difference between a mile an hour in the speed of two space annihilators often spells victory or defeat."

In addition to the improvements on the track itself, three large gates will be built

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Echoes of the Hoover-Laval Conference—Tremendous Victory of British Conservatives—Japan Doesn't Weaken in Manchurian Affair.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PREMIER LAVAL has sailed back home happy in the belief that his conversations with President Hoover accomplished a great deal toward settling world problems. And Mr. Hoover and his aids presumably are equally satisfied. Others, in America and Europe, are doubtful. However, deductions from the rather vague statements issued by the President and the premier are that the real achievements of the conference are these:

Co-operation between the United States and France on the economic and financial remedies necessary to end the worldwide depression; recognition of the fact that Germany may find it necessary to call for re-examination of its capacity to pay reparations, as provided by the Young plan, in lieu of extension of the Hoover moratorium; maintenance of the gold standard and a stabilization of exchange rates through the medium of international monetary conference, if necessary; an end of the drive on the dollar, so far as French holders thereof are concerned, and an excellent understanding of the political problems which underlie such questions as disarmament.

Senator Borah's projection of himself and his opinions into the discussions will be a subject of excited speculation for some time to come. Whether or not he tried to steal the spotlight, he almost succeeded in doing just that when he bluntly told the French correspondents that the Versailles peace treaty would have to be revised, especially in regard to the Polish corridor and the division of Hungary, and that the United States would not enter into any security pact. In later conversations with M. Laval and with Tytus Filipowicz, the minister from Poland, Mr. Borah stuck to his pronouncements though he admitted considerable ignorance of conditions in central Europe. M. Laval treated the chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations with politeness, but the French newspapers dismissed his suggestions as childish.

MANY of the Berlin papers called the parley in Washington a failure, but German statesmen unofficially expressed their satisfaction because President Hoover advised Europe it must get together and arrive at a definite agreement, not only on reparations, but on war debts also. He did not, it was remarked, address himself to France and Germany alone. It was said that German fears that the country might be placed at the mercy of France if the Washington parleys failed to accomplish a joint solution had proved unwarranted, and that the problems are now before Europe as a whole. Berlin feels that an international conference on war debts and reparations must be called quickly.

Germany derived further satisfaction from the visit to Berlin of Dino Grandi, foreign minister of Italy. The Italian pledged his country to help Germany in the task of overcoming its present great difficulties and the Berlin officials also believe that the forthcoming trip of Signor Grandi to Washington will further clarify the situation and redound to the benefit of Germany.

GREAT BRITAIN went to the polls and gave the Nationalist government of Ramsay MacDonald a most astonishing victory. The Labor party was almost wiped out so far as parliamentary membership goes, and the Conservatives are in full control. Though at this writing the returns are not quite complete, it is known that every member of the cabinet is re-elected except Sir William Jowett, attorney general, who lost to another Conservative candidate, and Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden, who was not a candidate. The success of Prime Minister MacDonald himself at Seaton Harbor was in doubt for a time, but he won by a good majority. Among the victors were Lady Nancy Astor and Viscount Bessborough, son of Earl Beatty.

Labor party leaders who went down in defeat include Arthur Henderson, Ben Tillett, Ben Turner, John Clynes and Margaret Bondfield. They and other prominent Laborites will be provided with seats later through the resignation of members representing sure constituencies. Sir Oswald Mosley, wealthy leader of the new party, was a poor third in his district.

The triumph of the Conservatives is so tremendous that it may prove embarrassing and result in the downfall of Prime Minister MacDonald. The Tories have such a huge majority that they probably will take over the control of the government. In that case it is expected they will undertake to pass protective tariff legislation, though Stanley Baldwin and other Conservative leaders have been rather non-committal on that subject.

RADICAL Republican congressmen, eight in number, have served notice on the regular Republicans that they will not co-operate with the latter in the organization of the new house unless their demands for agricultural and unemployment relief are given consideration. These La Follette followers, according to their newspaper in Madison, are to hold a meeting within a few weeks and have invited the attendance of radical representatives from other states, namely: Philip D. Swing, California; E. H. Campbell, Iowa; Fiorello La Guardia, New York; James H. Sinclair, North Dakota; O. B. Lovette, Tennessee, and Paul J. Kvale, Minnesota.

DEMOCRATIC financial experts in the senate are proposing the creation of a $2,000,000,000 pool for the government for immediate redrawing of frozen real estate securities and other solid paper in the hands of banks. The plan was put forward by Senator Bulkley of Ohio, who called it a corollary of the Hoover emergency economic program. He urged that it should be carried out through an established government agency rather than a new one, and suggested the federal land banks. His idea is that the government should float bonds to raise the huge sum, believing that such an issue would do a lot in drawing currency out of hoarding.

Senator Glass of Virginia, who is spokesman for the Democrats on banking matters, gave the Bulkley plan his approval. Both these senators are on the banking subcommittee now engaged in drafting new legislation. They have declared their opposition to any tampering with the federal reserve system in the effort to get that organization to rediscount new paper to meet the emergency.

CONTROVERSY over the administration's naval economy program reached the acrimonious stage. William Howard Gardiner, president of the Navy league, a civilian organization, gave out a statement attacking the President's navy construction policies and accusing Mr. Hoover of "abysmal ignorance" of the reasons why navies are maintained. The President retorted with the announcement that he would appoint a committee to investigate the charges made by Gardiner, declaring they were full of untruths and misstatements and that at the conclusion of the inquiry he would expect a public apology from Gardiner.

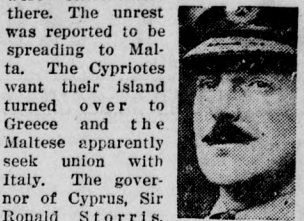

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the half billion dollar, private pool formed according to the President's proposals have been coming in so plentifully from all parts of the country that its managers informed the President it was about to put the credit extension plan into operation by helping banks turn their good but frozen assets into cash for business purposes.

Hopeful of buoyant results from the plan, the administration has dropped for the time being its contemplated action for strengthening railroad bonds.

SECRETARY OF WAR HURLEY, on his return to Washington, reported to President Hoover what he learned in the Philippines, and immediately thereafter Mr. Hoover announced that in his opinion independence for the islands at this time, without assurances of economic stability, would lead to disaster. He knows, however, that a large group in congress, perhaps a majority in each house, is ready to vote for independence, so he is getting ready to offer a new policy for the islands that he hopes will head off such legislation. This policy provides for American co-operation in giving the Philippines economic and governmental stability, the methods to be presented in the President's message at the opening of congress in December. He wishes to foster the establishment of efficient self-government and to promote the development of foreign markets for the products of the islands.

ENGLAND'S troubles in Cyprus continued, although troops were hastily brought to the island by plane from Egypt and warships were concentrated there. The unrest was reported to be spreading to Malta. The Cypriotes want their island turned over to Greece and the Maltese apparently seek union with Italy. The governor of Cyprus, Sir Ronald Storris, whose official residence in Nikosia was burned by the rioters, reported later that the situation in the island's towns was easier except in Kyrenia, where mobs tried to tear down the British flag and hoist the flag of Greece. In some other places the natives fought the troops and burned customs buildings. The bishop of Kyrenia was among those arrested. It is not at all surprising to learn that the Third Internationale is blamed for the outbreaks in Cyprus and the unrest in Malta. The colonial office in London has known for some time that Communists were working in those islands through the British branch of the League Against Imperialism, and it was discovered the other day that the Communists had planned to blow up the immense naval and private stores of oil in Cyprus. It was also learned that Maltese organizations have called on their merchants scattered throughout the Mediterranean to join in a boycott of British goods.

Sir Ronald Storris

ONE must admire the nerve and steady persistence of Japan even if her rights and motives are questionable. As the Manchurian affair stands now, the Japanese are ready to fight China if that is necessary to enforce their demands, though they profess only peaceful intentions; they have defied the League of Nations, refusing to listen to the order of the league council that they withdraw their troops in Manchuria to the railway zone before November 16, when the council will reassemble; they commanded the Chinese government to repair at once a river bridge which was damaged by bombs from their own planes; and now they have sent, through Foreign Minister Shidehara, a "friendly warning" to the Soviet Russian government urging that Russian troops demonstrations on the Manchurian-Siberian border be discontinued. Baron Shidehara told Moscow he was deeply concerned over these military movements and that they were causing an unpleasant effect on both Chinese and Japanese soldiers.

When the league council meets Japan will lay before it, as part of its case, a list of treaties which it contends China has failed to respect. Tokyo refuses to consider the proposal to refer these pacts to The Hague peace court, holding there is no difficulty in their interpretation.

OVER in Jugo-Slavia they are going to have an important election on November 8, and it may result in the curbing of the royal power. Recently

Peter Zivovitch, lieutenant general of the royal guard and a popular figure in the country, became premier. Now he has been compelled to resign his commission in the army to conform to the king's bidding that he place himself as a civilian at the head of the government party list in the election. Some political observers see in the king's action a subtle move to deprive Zivovitch of his great strength.

Peter Zivovitch

AL CAPONE, who was sentenced to eleven years in prison and fined $50,000 by Federal Judge Wilkerson in Chicago for income tax fraud, is to remain in the county jail there until the United States Court of Appeals passes on his case. He hoped to be released on bail, but this the appeals court refused, though it decreed that he should not be sent to Leavenworth immediately, as Judge Wilkerson preferred.

Philip D'Andrea, Capone's bodyguard during the trial, was sentenced to six months in jail by Judge Wilkerson on the charge of contempt of court. He was found to be carrying a revolver into the courtroom, and the judge considered him a part of the hoodlum organization that tried to intimidate the government's witnesses.

PROMINENT men who passed away during the week included Ronald W. Boyden, American member of the world court at The Hague; John M. Bowman, president of a great hotel corporation, and Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago American league baseball club.

Field Tests Prolong Life of Telephone Poles

On the top of a hill near Limon, Colorado, there is an unusual sight. Standing upright are closely-bunched columns in long ordered rows looking like a burying ground of some savage race. But on nearer inspection these columns turn out to be poles, much like fence slight that it would prove wiser to use the less effective one because of its much lower cost. Other climates, other soils might make it imperative to use the first preservative regardless of its greater price. These are among the problems try a black insect, referred to as the carpenter ant, commits similar depredations. But the chief foe is decay, which is brought about by fungous organisms.

In combating these enemies creosote is the most commonly used preservative. It is a heavy black coal-tar product with an asphaltic smell. In creosoting Southern pine poles, 100 to 200 poles are placed in a huge cylinder. The ends are then bolted on to permit the running of high pressure. The oil is at a temperature of approximately 200° F., and the treatment continues for several hours, until the poles become well impregnated with the creosote oil.

For a Long and Useful Life

Chestnut and cedar poles are given open-tank treatment. Fifty or more poles are stood on end, and first hot and then cold creosote oil is run into the tank. The hot-cold process is used because the fibres of the wood will contract when subjected to cooling and draw in the oil.

A very much extended lease of life is given to telephone poles by the use of the preservatives. The engineers at the test plot can easily demonstrate this by showing the difference in poles, both cut from the same log and set out at the same time, one of which has been posts, but with the diameter of the usual telephone pole. They are, in fact, telephone poles; not carrying cross-arms and supporting wires, but undergoing weathering tests as part of the laboratory research program of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The plot at Limon is one of the three maintained in this country by the Bell System for investigations to prolong the life of its telephone poles. Six miles from the Gulf of Mexico at Gulfport, Mississippi, there is another, and the third is at Chester, New Jersey.

Weighing the Advantages

Before they are put into the ground, practically all telephone poles are treated with preservatives to resist the decay of wood. There are various kinds of preservatives used, consisting of coal tar distillates and other chemical compounds. The problem of the telephone engineer is to find out which one of these is the best for the particular conditions encountered.

One type of preservative may be more effective than another in warm, humid atmospheres, and an entirely different kind superior in a dry climate. Or in certain climates the difference in decay resistance of certain preservatives may be so that those strange appearing test plots help to decide. There is also the matter of the different woods for telephone poles. Southern yellow pine, chestnut, cedar, and locust are all used, and each has its advantages under certain conditions.

The telephone pole, which in its unassuming way performs a yeoman's task in providing telephone communication, is beset by numerous enemies. Small white burrowers known as termites eat their way in veritable little tunnels through the poles. In some regions of the coun-

P. T. A. Working To Supply Lunches For Needy Pupils

This fall and winter the Grammar school P. T. A. is putting aside its usual activities and is concentrating on welfare work for the needy children. As part of this program they are sponsoring the feeding of about 40 children who are in need of having well balanced lunches at noon. Most of these children are under weight but sometimes they are up to normal weight but come from parents who need the financial relief of having at least one good meal for their child each day. This relief work is not being centered upon habitual charity cases but upon good people who are suffering from "bad times" this winter.

Investigation of eligible children has been carried on by individual class room teachers, the school nurse and a representative from the Campbell Relief Society.

Contributions of money and food are being received from the Pundita Circle, The Young Woman's Service Club the Kiwanis Club, J. C. Ainsley Packing Co., Mrs. Gordon Ainsley, Mr. Harry Smith, Mr. Dan Yeager, Mrs. J. W. Cuthbert, Mrs. C. L. Johnson, E. R. Eennedy, Mrs. B. Sawyer, Mrs. Ann Sawyer and Mr. S. N. Hedegard. The results of a benefit card party have also been added to the P. T. A. fund.

Each meal is served at a cost of 10 cents to the P. T. A. This only includes the actual cost of the food and omits cooks services and all overhead expenses. Miss Farman, Mrs. Gardner and Mrs. Evans are donating their services.

The children who receive this help are not made conspicuous. They merely receive a special lunch ticket each day which is signed and dated by their teacher. This tells the cook that the child is to receive a special plate lunch and substitutes the ticket for money at the cashier's desk. The following is the type of lunch each child receives:

One-half pint milk in some form each day, either in soup or hot chocolate, a slice of wheat flour bread and butter; a hot dish of macaroni and cheese, baked beans or Spanish rice, or similar dish, and a buttered vegetable. In addition to this meal, desserts of fruit, etc., have been contributed by kind hearted individuals. This is considered an additional treat and is not included in the cost of the meal.

MAURER MACHINE COMPANY

Located at 132 Spencer in San Jose, Ballard 103

The Maurer Machine Company makes a specialty of grinding cylinders and crankshafts. This is a highly specialized service and one which is very essential. When you have your cylinders ground at this establishment the most accurate instruments will tell you how perfect they are.

No matter what it may be your motor needs in this line they are able to take care of them. In charge is a machine expert of ability who is able in an instant to tell you exactly what is wrong, what the probable cost will be, and if it will not pay to fix the particular part they will promptly tell you so. One of the special features of the place is the getting out of work on time and when promised.

By close microscopic examination it has been found that grinding of cylinders is far better than reaming. What is cylinder grinding? It is a highly perfected method of making cylinders round. Regrinding cylinders has a desirable effect on the power in that it restores the motor to its normal condition. A grinding job gives the owner a seasoned motor not obtainable in a new car. Reground cylinders are better than new ones, not just as good. The leading auto and commercial car manufacturers of this country use the process used here.
